Man Is Making Diamonds Now Where Before Only Nature Did

By DELOS SMITH
United Press Science Editor

SCHENECTADY, N. Y., Feb. 15 (AP) — Men are making diamonds. Up to now only nature has made them.

General Electric opened its scientific research laboratories today to display diamond-making by its scientists who started from scratch and duplicated nature's hardest and most cherished material.

They were not imitation diamonds, said Dr. C. Guy Suits, vice-president and director of research. Nor were they merely like diamonds. They were diamonds, precisely identical with the diamonds made by nature.

The first man-made diamonds are of size and quality suitable for industrial use. The cost of making them was approximately twice today's market price for industrial diamonds.

The discovery of the "how-to" of diamond-making, which many scientists had believed was a secret of nature man might never unlock — seemed to have vast G-E in a tizzy. After all, the company's primary business is manufacturing electrical equipment.

Low-Priced Sparklers

Dr. Suits wouldn't deny the obvious implications which were:

1. If man can make diamonds at all, he surely can learn to make diamonds which are as flawless, beautiful and big as any made by nature.

2. If the laboratory cost of the first man-made industrial diamonds is only twice the market selling price of nature-made industrial diamonds, the eventual cost of man-made diamonds will be drastically lower.

All he would say was that "any conclusion we are about to make diamonds of a size and quality suitable for gem use is decidedly premature."

"On the other hand, if the present high cost of making diamonds by the G-E process can be reduced, the primary application of man-made diamonds will probably be in industrial tools for cutting and polishing."

G-E's discovery of the diamond "how-to" began four years ago with a routine investigation of the laboratory's mechanical investigation section into what happens to materials under high temperature and high pressure. The scientists who started thus and ended up with diamonds were Dr. Francis P. Bundy, H. Tracy Hall, Herbert M. Strong, and Robert Wentorf.

The chemical ingredients of the diamond are well known. Chemically diamonds are identical to graphite and charcoal. But somehow nature managed to crystallize these ingredients into the hardest and most beautiful substance contained in the earth.

Two Techniques

The G-E "team" of scientists developed two techniques for making diamonds. Dr. Bundy subjected a compound of carbons to a pressure of 800,000 pounds to the square inch, which is about 55,000 times the pressure of the atmosphere at sea level, for hours. He used the laboratory's 1,000-ton press. That made the compound a solid and the core of this solid was so very hard it would scratch anything.

Dr. Hall took over from there. He designed a chamber, which he called the "bell," in which a pressure of more than 1,500,000 pounds to the square inch and a temperature of more than 5,000 degrees Fahrenheit could be maintained. The "carbonaceous compound" solidified in this chamber, in minutes, and the solid yielded diamonds, not in ones or two but in clusters.

The man-made diamonds passed very test of the diamonds.

The Second National Scout Jamboree Was At Valley Forge

Part Four

President Truman personally opened the Second National Jamboree which brought 47,163 Scouts and Leaders to historic Valley Forge for a week of camping together in July 1950, when the Government honored the Boy Scouts of America with a commemorative postage stamp.

The Crusade to "Strengthen the Arm of Liberty" ended with a 33 per cent gain in membership and goals were met in leadership and program. In 1951, the United States was represented at the 7th World Jamboree at Bad Ischl, Austria by 700 Explorers. At this great convocation 13,000 Scouts represented 39 countries and colonial possessions.

In May, 1951 John M. Schiff of Oyster Bay, N. Y., succeeded Amos Houghton as President of the Boy Scouts of America.

Expanded development at the Philmont Scout Ranch at Cimarron, New Mexico, made possible new leadership training possibilities. The Ranch now attracts over 10,000 Explorers each Summer from all parts of the nation for wilderness camp-

Barrymore Does Not Drink

UNITED PRESS EXTRA
By ALINE MOSBY

United Press Hollywood Writer
HOLLYWOOD — The name of John Barrymore to most people means a great actor, but to some it recalls his prowess with a bottle, and that legend often haunts his son.

John Barrymore, Jr., today decided to shake free from that legend.

He wants the world to know he definitely is a teetotaler.

The newest edition to the Barrymore acting clan is tired of reading when he gets a traffic ticket that he was "under the influence."

"Yes, I seldom meet a guy who doesn't think I drink. When I'm introduced to someone in a restaurant they say, 'Come on, Johnny, let's have a drink.'"

"I don't drink," he said earnestly. "I can't get sick. Not that I'm a hypocrite. I tried it. I took my first drink at 16. It made me deadly ill. Since then I've been a teetotaler."

Divorce Suit Cancelled

John sat in his Beverly Hills apartment, furnished with early American antiques. His pretty, vivacious wife, actress Cara Williams, recently cancelled a scheduled divorce suit, and today they held hands and smiled at each other as Barrymore spoke eagerly of his desire to shed any connections with alcohol.

Young John insisted his abstemiousness has nothing to do with the older John's social life.

"My father drank, but he drank with style," the tall, dark-haired actor said. "He was witty. If a man can drink that way, let him do it. But if you can't drink gracefully, I can't see why you'd try it."

Red-haired Cara added as she served me a glass of milk. "Often you'll read nasty things about people in show business but they never fight it. They are afraid to. We're not."

A Milk Drinker

Young Barrymore is a milk drinker. At parties he occasionally switches to buttermilk. One reason some people think he drinks so much is that he is naturally "lively and exuberant" without benefit of martinis.

Fortunately, the mistaken impression of some persons has not hampered his acting career. Since entering the profession five years ago, John has had to fight for a toe-hold only because when you're an actor's son they say, he was a great actor but what can you do?

Smokers Census Will Be Taken

WASHINGTON — Census takers started rapping the doors of 25,000 homes across the nation today to compile some facts about smoking habits.

The survey is part of the government's research program on the possible relationship between smoking and disease. It was requested by the U. S. Public Health Service. Questions on smoking will be asked in conjunction with regular inquiries on employment and unemployment in the Census Bureau's monthly population survey. The bureau said: "The survey will provide basic facts, now lacking as to the number of smokers and non-smokers by age, sex, color and other characteristics for each of the major regions of the United States."

The questions on smoking habits will be asked of non-smokers and smokers alike. It will cover cigars and pipes as well as cigarettes.

What's New In Washington

UNITED PRESS EXTRA
By HARMAN W. NICHOLS
United Press Staff Correspondent
Washington — What's new in Washington?

A high school in the Washington area has placed a ban on "teen-aged boys wearing skin light jeans to classes. The headmaster even sent a few kids home. This prompted a letter to the editor of the Washington Daily News. This controversy about students wearing skin-tight jeans is embarrassing to us." The memo was signed "George Washington, Thomas Jefferson, et al."

Freshman congress lady... Coya Knutson, the Democrat from Minnesota, says in her newsletter that she is happy to be the first woman in history ever to be on the House Agriculture Committee. At the first meeting of the group, Rep. Watkins Abbott, the Democrat from Virginia, was the host. He passed around "fresh, plump peanuts." "When it comes my turn," Mrs. Knutson asked her voters, "what shall I serve?" It has to be something in common with her state. Hope about a smorgasbord, lady?

The Civil Aeronautics Administration is having to re-jigger its mailing list. One man has been taking a correspondence course in mail. The fellow has passed his tests and wants to learn more about what makes an airplane purr. So he wrote the CAA about a change of address - from one prison to another.

Most senators think law-making is a fulltime job. But Sen. Strom Thurmond, the South Carolina Democrat, managed to handle two assignments without fear of criticism. In addition to being a senator, he happens also to be a brigadier general in the Army reserves. While he's in Washington, he is assigned to the 352d Military Government Area Headquarters here.

A certain elevator boy in the Senate side of the Capitol is still shaking his head in confusion. The last war in the middle of an up-trip and at one floor said "Going up." A lady visitor fidgeting in the hall yelled in anger: "Where inarnation are the elevators that go down?" The lady got straightened out then came down. "Oh, this is the one," she said.

The Capitol is the cross-roads of America. Theaters helping with the Polio March of Dimes have placed milk bottles tagged with the name of each state. Two cities are added to the list, Washington and Brooklyn. The district, of course, always kicks in the most money. Second place: Brooklyn.

Chocolate in the Grand Manner!

When Napoleon called for refreshment, he meant hot chocolate, his favorite treat. And the little general liked it very hot, very smooth, medium sweet, and teasingly spiced with a stick of cinnamon candy!

Inspired by Napoleon, the whole of Europe took to hot chocolate in the 18th century, and the chocolate pot was the symbol of gracious entertaining straight down to the turn of the 20th century.

Streamers of hot chocolate are still a gracious and luscious refreshment for young and old. And there's no trick nowadays to preparing a chocolate cup suitable for the great Napoleon himself—just right for mid-morning, afternoon, or evening party. Chocolate drink, just as it comes from dairy delivery or the corner store, is ready to be heated at a moment's notice. It's smooth, chocolate, full-flavored.

For the Napoleon touch—a wonderfully delicious and unusual flavor—serve a small dish of vari-colored candy sticks with the cups of chocolate, so that each guest may add his favorite flavor to the cup. Cinnamon, peppermint, lemon, orange, saffron, taffy—any assortment of candy sticks lends piquant flavor and delight to this gracious dining custom.
